Product	Historically, the thinking was: a good product will sell itself. However there are no bad products anymore in today's highly competitive markets. Plus there are many laws giving customers the right to return products that he perceives as bad. Therefore the question on product has become: does the organization create what its intended customers want? Define the characteristics of your product or service that meets the needs of your customers.	Functionality, Quality, Appearance, Packaging, Brand, Service, Support, Warranty
Price	How much are the intended customers willing to pay? Here we decide on a pricing strategy - do not let it just happen! Even if you do not need to charge for a service is lost leader, you must realize that this is a conscious decision as of some part of the pricing strategy. Although competing on price is as old as mankind, the consumer is often still sensitive for price discounts and special offers. Price has also an emotional side: something that is expensive must be good. Permanently competing on price is for many companies not a very sensible approach.	List Prices, Discounts, Financing, Leasing Options, Allowances
Place	Available at the right place, at the right time, in the right quarters? Some of the revolutions in business have come about by changing this: Think of the internet and mobile telephones.	Locations, Logistics, Channel members, Channel Motivation, Market Coverage, Service Levels, Internet, Mobile
Promotion	(How) are the chosen target groups informed or educated about the organization and its products? This includes all the weapons in the marketing armoury - advertising, selling, sales promotions, Public Relations, etc. While the other three P's have lost much of their meaning in today's markets, Promotion has become the most important P to focus on.	Advertising, Public Relations, Messages, Direct Sales, Sales, Media, Budget
